You may have noticed 3-D is all the rage in the film industry. It appears those designing sets for live stage have also taken notice. When "Peter Pan" threesixty premiered at Ferry Park, the world's first 360-degree CGI theater — a set aided by brilliant computer animation — it marked the first time U.S. audiences enjoyed the magical interpretation of the classic. "As Peter, Tink and the Darling children take off from the nursery (and the flying is terrific), they seem to whiz over an extraordinary three-dimensional vision of Edwardian London," wrote Charles Spence in the London Telegraph after taking in "Peter Pan" threesixty's London debut last summer. See "Peter Pan" six days a week through Aug. 29 at Ferry Park. Visit onlyinsanfrancisco.com for more information.
